ISIS

Quarterly Organ of the History of Science Society founded (in 1913) and edited by

GEORGE SARTON, D.Sc.
Harvard Library 185, Cambridge, Mass.

Isis may be obtained from any Bookseller at the price of 6 dollars per volume illustrated. Members of the History of Science Society receive each year at least one volume of about 600 pp. free of charge. Annual dues, 5 dollars. Corresponding Secretary, Dr. H. R. Viets, 8 The Fenway, Boston, Mass.

Isis is the foremost journal on the history of science published in the world to-day. It contains articles, reviews, notes, queries, and elaborate critical bibliographies of the history and philosophy of science. Volumes XXX and part of XXXI will be published in 1939.

Writers of books and papers on the history of science are asked to send a copy as promptly as possible to the Editor of Isis in order that they may be registered in the Critical bibliography. This is the best way of obtaining for their work its certain incorporation into the literature of the subject.

Isis may be examined in any good reference library all over the world.

THE WORKS OF FRANCESCO LANDINI

edited by
LEONARD ELLINWOOD

FRANCESCO LANDINI was the foremost Italian composer of the trecento, the period known in music history as the ars nova. The publication here for the first time of his complete works forms an important addition to the available corpus of mediaeval music, an addition of significance to all students of mediaeval culture. Furthermore, the influential role of Italian composition, and the fact of Italian leadership, in the music of the period must now be recognized.

The transcription of the music is provided with variant readings, annotations, and accompanying verses as given in the basic manuscript. An introduction discusses early Italian polyphony, Landini's life, the manuscript sources, the system of notation, the style of the music, and the method of transcription. There are also appendices of pertinent documents, a bibliography, cross-reference tables of Landini's works, and eight plates, including six photographs of the original manuscripts.

FINANCIAL RELATIONS OF THE PAPACY WITH ENGLAND TO 1327

by

WILLIAM EDWARD LUNT
Haverford College

IN THIS STUDY, the research for which was sponsored by the Academy as a part of the cooperative project Papal Relations with England up to the Protestant Revolution, the attempt has been made to trace, as fully as the material permits, the development of the nature of the papal revenues derived from England, the history of their administration, and the effects produced upon the relations between the papacy and England. The subject has not previously been treated comprehensively, nor has any one chronological period or major topical aspect been thoroughly explored before. It is hoped that the present study may serve to correct the many erroneous statements about phases and details of the subject which have become current through too implicit reliance upon fragmentary and partial evidence, particularly upon that of the chroniclers.

The materials utilized for the study are the printed sources and manuscripts found in the Vatican Archives and Library, the Public Record Office, the British Museum, the University and College Libraries at Oxford and Cambridge, English diocesan archives, and some other English archives.

JOHN THE SCOT

ANNOTATIONES IN MARCIANUM

edited by

CORA E. LUTZ

Wilson College

THE commentary of John the Scot on the De Nuptiis Philologiae et Mercurii of Martianus Capella is the only extant work of the great Irish philosopher hitherto not published in entirety. A running commentary on the Seven Liberal Arts, it is of importance first of all for the study of the life and thought of its author, in that, being of relatively early date, it affords an insight into the development of his unique philosophical system. Even more important, however, is the very great influence which the commentary had in giving the Seven Liberal Arts their universal popularity in the Middle Ages and in developing the mediaeval vogue of allegory. Finally, the commentary is of considerable use in emending the corrupt text of Martianus Capella.

The present edition prints the full text, from the only known manuscript, and is equipped with an introduction which analyzes content, sources, and style, and treats also of the authorship of the manuscript. Three appendices discuss two dates in the commentary, the identity of the Πέπλος of Theophrastus, and the relation of another commentary, alleged to be the work of Dunchad.
